

Pen: Levenge Plumpster

Nib: Broad, steel

Ink: Pelikan Brilliant Brown

Paper: Black 'n Red 24#

This Levenge Plumpster is a big, bold pen that makes no excuses for itself. If the True Writer is a manager, then the Plumpster is the CEO or perhaps even sitting on the Board of Directors. This is the pen that Alex P. Keaton aspired to use one day.

I really like this pen. Initially, the steel section was a little concerning to me, but in use, it's not nearly as bad as I was expecting. It's a little slipperier than I like, but the design still works well. I think that Levenge could have probably saved some weight by going with a plastic section, but it might have screwed up the balance in the hand if they had.

All in all, I think that Levenge has another winner on their hands - this one takes no prisoners on its way to the top, either.